

INCENSE HOLDER

An incense holder, also known as an incense burner or censer, is a device designed to hold and burn incense sticks or cones safely. It serves both a functional and aesthetic purpose, allowing the user to enjoy the aromatic fragrance of the incense while providing a safe and controlled environment for burning. <https://spiritualsenses.in/collections/incense-stick-holder>

Here are some common types of incense holders:

Stick Holders:

- Simple Wooden Holders: These are often straightforward designs with a hole or groove to hold the incense stick securely.
- Ceramic Holders: These can be more decorative, with various designs and shapes, providing a stable base for the incense stick.

Cone Holders:

- Ceramic or Metal Cones: Shaped like small bowls, these holders are specifically designed for burning incense cones. They often have openings or vents to allow the fragrant smoke to escape.
- Tower Holders: These holders have a tall, tower-like design with multiple levels, allowing for the placement of several incense cones at once.

Plate or Tray Holders:

- Ash Catchers: These holders typically have a flat surface to catch ash as the incense burns. They can be made of wood, ceramic, or metal and may include decorative elements.

Hanging Holders:

- Hanging Censers: These are often decorative containers with chains or ropes for suspending the incense. They are commonly used in religious or ceremonial settings.

Electric or Battery-Powered Holders:

- Modern and Convenient: Some incense holders use electricity or batteries to heat the incense, eliminating the need for a flame. They often come with adjustable settings for controlling the intensity of the fragrance.

When choosing an incense holder, consider the type of incense you prefer (sticks or cones) and your personal style preferences. Additionally, prioritize safety by choosing holders made from fire-resistant materials and ensuring proper ventilation.
